

I would hope that you dont not change law. Before the Indiana's Telephone Privacy Law was in place, I would get multiple calls a day that would not even show up on my caller ID and when there system would pickup on another call, my phone would still ring but no-one on the other end (Phantom calls). I consider this a form of harrassment as well as if a person calls me, they should not be able to block their number from me. I may recieve 1 call a week now from telemarketers as well as I dont get the "phantom" calls anymore. Please seriously rethink this before you change it again. There is no reason that you should be harrassed by phone in your own home by people trying to sell you something.

Thank you,
Mark M. Temple